The New York campaign slogan, "Hurrah for the man with a square jaw," is an open invitation to swat it.

Has the American Missionary association got along sixty-two years without raising Burlington? We can't believe it. It can't be true.

Charles Anderson Dana, a relative of the late editor, is a candidate for the New York assembly, but he seems to be handicapped by the spelling of his initials.

President Taft, with a 400,000 acre golf links at his disposal, in Texas, has plenty of opportunity to practice those long shots of his, and no danger of going past the mark.

Sixty-four years of continuous service for the Fairbanks scale factory in St. Johnsbury ought to entitle Francis Walker, aged 85, to a vacation and pension for the remainder of his life. It is a record for loyal service which is rarely, if ever, equalled.

Vermont newspaper men will congratulate William A. Hendrick, formerly of the Rutland News, on his appointment as general manager of the New Haven, Conn., Evening Leader and the Sunday Leader. Since leaving the Rutland newspaper field, Mr. Hendrick has been engaged in newspaper work at Watertown, N. Y., as general manager of the Watertown Standard.

According to the Morrisville Messenger, Morrisville needs the electric railroad connection with Waterbury, via Stowe, and the electric railroad now running from Waterbury to Stowe needs the Morrisville business. Things which are so closely allied surely ought to be brought together within a reasonable time, and the extension of the Mount Mansfield company's track is something which ought to be worked for heartily.

It seems like an anti-climax of life for William I. Buchanan, once American minister to Argentina and later minister to the new republic of Panama, to die friendless and alone in a London hospital after being picked up from the sidewalk by a London "lobby," but a personal of Mr. Buchanan's life discloses that his career represented a loop, with the zenith of his power and influence in the middle, and bending sharply downward at both ends.

The "beautiful family" of James H. Vahey, candidate for governor of Massachusetts, is being held up as an argument for his election; but the Boston Herald opines that the people of Massachusetts won't be so extremely hard-hearted as to separate Vahey from his family or his family from Vahey even long enough for him to run over to the State House. What's Vahey's family got to do with the governorship, anyway? Fred G. Fleetwood hasn't got any family at all, but that doesn't stand against his ambitions for governor of Vermont.

A nice little argument is going on between the Bennington Banner and our old friend, Myron J. Haggood of Peru, the chief point of which is whether the Peruvian is using newspaper space in defense of does because he wants the publicity himself, or because he wishes to protect the deer. In any event, Mr. Haggood is winning because he is getting the notoriety for himself and he is stirring public opinion against the law which permits the killing of deer. There is a widespread sentiment that the recent law enabling the slaughter of deer is wrong, and the idea is sweeping all over the state. The belief finds expression in the posting of lands forbidding hunting. There never has been such a general movement along this line.

We suppose that it is one of the elevating evidences of the higher learning that all the students of the university of Maine have gone on a strike because hazing was abolished by the faculty, and several students were expelled because they broke the regulation. Alumni have implored the students to resume their studies and thus forestall the possibility of the university getting a very serious setback in educational work and a silly name besides. But the students remain obdurate, believing, no doubt, that they are standing out for a virtuous "privilege," which should not be denied them, the right to cowardly bulldoze the newcomers into acceptance of the customs of the institution. Higher education is fast forgetting itself.

GOOD ADVICE WITH GENEROUS BENEFACTION.

Along with the dispensing of his money largesses to educational institutions, Dr. D. K. Pearson of Hinsdale, Ill., throws in a good deal of sound advice that smacks of the early training which he secured in a little Vermont homestead in Bradford and the following of which enabled him to accumulate money enough so that he to-day is regarded as one of the country's most generous benefactors. In sending his promised $50,000 to Montpelier seminary coincident with the raising of $100,000 by the school, Dr. Pearson quoted Principal Bishop the ripe but true adage, "Success begets success," meaning that the success which attended the efforts to secure the endowment for the institution indicates the further success of the Montpelier institution financially, as well as educationally. At the same time, he interposes a shrewd suggestion that although the school has the money, it must work hard to keep it, saying, "Now Montpelier seminary has $150,000 clean endowment, and one hundred years from this date the seminary must have the same amount," not using one cent of the fund except the interest which accrues from its wise investment of the funds now at the disposal of the school.

At the close of his letter, Dr. Pearson writes: "Now you can go on and build a good dormitory, the people will help you. It pleases me to send you the money. It is the best $50,000 that I ever had. I saw the old seminary built, I knew exactly where the brick were made. At the commencement of every school year make up your budget of expenses and never come out in debt. Choose the best men in Vermont for trustees, select them for their good business qualities, and good horse sense."

The well intended advice of the kindly old gentleman will certainly be accepted seriously by the persons who are in charge of the institution, and the friends of the school who have labored so hard for the endowment fund have thus the opportunity of expressing to Dr. Pearson their great gratification over the results and their appreciation of the assistance of the largest single donor.

CURRENT COMMENT

The Country Not Busted.

The president has stepped his foot on foreign soil and the world did not come to an end. Glory be! Now maybe if we of Vermont were to bust the ridiculous mountain rule we should find that the robins came back the next spring just the same.—St. Albans Messenger.

Clerical Indulgence.

"Life is just one thing after another," was the way in which the Rev. Dr. Percy Grant began his sermon in downtown New York last Sunday. It proved to be a quotation, and as a sensation is probably was not nearly as effective as the celebrated opening of Henry Ward Beecher's—"It's a d—d hot!"—Boston Herald.

Wears Same Sized Hat.

The Herald commends to young men troubled with "swelled-head" the remark of Ray Collins, home in Burlington after a phenomenal success in professional baseball last summer. Questioned by a Free Press reporter, the young fellow said, in reference to his recent shut-out of the New York Giants, "I had a little luck; that's all." Of course, luck figured in the result—it always does, but a clean-cut, modest chap who can pitch as Collins can and yet deprecate his powers is surely a rare bird in this age of "smart Alecks" and "fresh ducks."—Northfield News.

Not a Cheap Guy.

Through the kindness of Hon. Guy W. Bailey, secretary of state, we are able to give in tabular form elsewhere a lot of information concerning the taxable property, grand list, etc., of the towns of Orange and Windsor counties as revealed by the appraisal of this year. It is a good thing to have state officials who are ready and willing to work a little for the public good in ways that may not seem to be strictly within their duty. To amount to a common maxim, "An official who does only what he is paid for doing, only gets paid for doing what he does." This same Guy W. is no cheap guy.—Randolph Herald and News.

Accommodating Railroad.

That was unique and very accommodating in the Central Vermont Railroad company, the holding of two trains for the convenience of two people in Montpelier bound for Chicago. The passengers missed their train at Montpelier Junction through the failure of the railroad employees to announce its departure. They sat in the station calmly while the train pulled out. Appealing to the Central Vermont officials at St. Albans by telegraph, the local train was sent back for them and the through train for the West was also held until they could board it. It is not usual for railroads to go to all this trouble and annoyance to accommodate two people without any official pull. Frequently the public are inconvenienced to accommodate some railroad official, riding in a private car, or otherwise. It is a little odd to find railroads going to a deal of trouble to please two ordinary people.—Rutland News.

Fleetwood's Friends Encouraged.

Fleetwood's friends are springing up and the younger element of the party is rallying to the support of the Landille candidate. The Bennington Banner took a straw vote the other day and found that more than half were in favor of Fleetwood, much to the editor's surprise. Traveling men report a very friendly feeling for Fleetwood all over the state. It is evident that his platform, his character and eminent qualifications for the place are appealing strongly to the sober second thought of the great mass of the voters. As he has no barrel to open and would not use money to influence voters if he had it, it is not to be wondered at that the old rounders, the caucus fixers, etc., do not enthuse over his candidacy. Watch them line up, then, help the man they oppose. Meanwhile Mr. Fleetwood's friends are very much encouraged by the outlook.—Morrisville Messenger.

Gives Barre Part Credit.

Montpelier arose to the emergency in the eleventh hour and succeeded in raising $100,000 for Montpelier seminary, thus assuring the gift of $50,000 from Dr. Daniel K. Pearson, conditional upon the raising of the $100,000.—Brattleboro Phoenix.

While Montpelier contributed handsomely to the undertaking and some of her citizens offered to "stand in" for the

The hard-to-fit age is when a boy first gets into long trousers. "Grown-up" models are not adapted to his youthful frame. Consequently we have a tailor specialist whose whole business is to plan, measure and fit for boys of this age.

This is particularly noticeable in Overcoats. A man's overcoat, tho it may be no larger in size, looks entirely wrong on a youth. Here are the correct styles and measurements for Boys, Youths, Young Men and Men, $4.00 to $28.00.

balance not raised at the expiration of the time, Montpelier should not be given all the credit for raising the endowment to make the Pearson gift possible. For instance, which has a seminary of its own, contributed over sixteen thousand dollars, as we are informed; while there were generous gifts from other places throughout the state.—Barre Times.

Well, Barre should have the credit due for its generosity and the handsome contribution of the Granite city was thoroughly appreciated. When, however, it looked as if the necessary sum would not be reached, public spirited men of Montpelier, which had already contributed over $25,000 to the fund, stepped in and gave the amount needed, otherwise the endowment would have been lost, and all the labor which had been expended would have been effort thrown away. Doubtless, it was to this that The Phoenix referred. It had never been stated anywhere that the $150,000, which had to be raised, was contributed by Montpelier.—Montpelier Argus.

JINGLES AND JESTS

Dedance.

Out of the glare and hostile
Of the sunny city street
Stands a lad of mighty mien
With his bare and dusty feet
And apart, his chest expanded,
And his fists are clenched, but
Facing foes against him stands he
"But I ain't a-skereed of you!"

There's a chip upon his shoulder
And a light within his eye
"Bring it on, you bold, bold
Then discreet, steps forth to try
A conclusion, just to settle
Who shall lead the ragged crew
And he shows his master mettle
"Hur! I ain't a-skereed of you!"

Boy, I wish you well forever!
May you know no harsh defeat!
May the gods who guard you never
Mix the bitter with the sweet!
But when life's full-troubled hurry
Grips you as 'tis bound to do,
May you say to care and worry
"Hur! I ain't a-skereed of you!"
—Chicago News

The Patient Man.

Mr. Hanpeck had hesitated a long while about doing this bold thing, but he felt that now was the time or never. "Dear," he said in a very timid voice, "I wish you wouldn't call me 'Leo' any more."
"Why not?" demanded his wife explosively. "Leo is your given name."
"I know, my dear, but it makes my friends laugh when you call me that. I was thinking you might call me 'John' just for a new name."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Beyond Forgiveness.

Patience—I hear they ran away and got married.
Patience—Yep.
Patience—I suppose her father will never forgive them.
Patience—Well, he forgave 'em for running away, but he never will forgive 'em for coming back home.—Yonkers Statesman.

Thy Hosiery.

The socks I darn for thee, dear heart,
Mean quite a pile of work to me;
I count them over, every one apart,
Thy hosiery, thy hosiery.

Each sock a mate, two mates a pair,
To clothe thy feet in storm and cold;
I count each sock unto the end, and find
I've skipped a hole.

Oh, carelessness, this thy reproof,
See how it looms across my sole,
I grind my teeth, and then in very truth
I darn that hole, sweetheart, I darn that hole!

Better Left Unsaid.

The Bride—Oh, darling, our honeymoon was just the loveliest ever.
The Groom—It certainly was, dearest.
The Bride—And I have only one regret—I may never have the pleasure of going through another.—Chicago News.

being made for the new office which the company is to have in the Howard Brothers and Gay block. On motion of Aldermen Alexander, it was voted to leave the question with the street committee to give the company the best route possible.

The street committee and the city engineer reported relative to the stonewall owned by Reed Brothers on Blackwell street and occupied by McCall & Carroll being in the street, that they found the wall to be 12 feet and 9 inches in the street on one end and 9 feet 7 inches on the other end, and that the firm was using as a stone yard 10 feet of the street. The committee recommended that the owners of the property be instructed to remove the building from the street and the occupiers to keep their stone out of the street. On motion of Alderman Rossi the report was accepted.

Alderman Rossi reported that he had been unable to procure any conclusive evidence as to the owner of the dog that chewed up D. Thierault's calf. He said that the three persons who saw the dog attack the calf say it was a large yellow dog, but they did not know its owner. He said that the calf was in a pitiful condition and should be killed, and on his motion the council voted to pay Mr. Thierault $10 for the calf and have it killed.

The city attorney and the city clerk reported that they had consulted with the Travelers' Liability insurance company in regard to canceling the city's policy, and the company's agent had stated that the team hire account could be left out of the policy if the city wanted it, and if the city wanted to cancel the policy it could do so by paying the minimum premium rate of $100. Alderman Hoyt thought that was quite a price to pay for nothing, and he doubted if they could make the city pay it. After considerable discussion it was voted to refer the question to the clerk and the chairman of the finance committee to report again.

The report of the water superintendent for the month of September was read and accepted. W. F. Richardson applied for a permit to move the old Bolster house at the corner of Camp and Hill streets along Camp street to the brook and on motion of Alderman Campbell his request was granted. The clerk read letters from G. C. Jones, general manager of the Central Vermont, C. M. Witters, attorney for the road, and from the local station agent, replying to the clerk's letter notifying the road to repair its crossings in this city. All of the letters stated that the matter would be taken up at once and the crossings repaired in short order.

The resignations of Harold Rydberg as a callman of hose company No. 2 and W. L. Harris as a callman of the central department were read and accepted. On motion of Alderman Thurston, it was voted to grant J. G. Sanguinetti a permit to move a building from Seminary street to a lot near the corner of Blackwell and North Main streets, under the same restrictions under which J. R. Tierney was given permission to move the old Martin house at the corner of Prospect street, with the exception that he be given 60 hours in which to get the building out of the street.

Street Supp's Salary.

Alderman Thurston said that he had conferred with the new superintendent of streets in regard to his salary, and that the superintendent was satisfied with a salary of $1,000 per year, and it was voted to pay him at that rate. Alderman Thurston also wanted to know what had become of the street railway extension question. He thought that it was about time that the city attorney got after them with sharp sticks. If it was necessary, he considered that it was a queer state of affairs that the company should come in here under a franchise and fulfill only what part of the contract they saw fit. The mayor said that the city attorney was looking after the matter, and that there would be a move of some kind made next week.

Won't Scramble For Office.

Many of the friends of the Hon. George F. Leland in different parts of the state are earnestly urging him to become a candidate for lieutenant-governor.

In justice to them, the Reporter is authorized to say that Mr. Leland will not decline to be a candidate, neither will he engage in any unbecomingly scramble for the position. It is a long while before the convention meets and in the meantime much is bound to happen that will tend to crystallize public sentiment, particularly in Windsor county whose political lines are always drawn between its two probate districts.

In a legal sense Windsor county is a unit, but politically speaking, it is practically two counties with one name, and simply because each district happens to have a candidate for the same office, neither should be laid aside on that ground alone.

Let us remember that the convention will be called to nominate a man and not a portion of landscape.—Springfield.
